Claims 1-19 are allowed.

Regarding claim 1, the prior art of record does not teach all the combined steps for a method of adjusting a printing width of a printing paper performed in a printer that drives motors placed horizontally and vertically and that prints data including the steps of deciding a speed value of the motor placed horizontally and a speed value of the motor placed vertically from the modified width decision value or the modified height decision value; and driving the motors placed horizontally and vertically in accordance with the decided speed values of the motors placed horizontally and vertically and printing the data.

Regarding claim 13, the prior art of record does not teach all the combined elements and components for an apparatus that adjusts a printing width of a printing paper included in a printer that drives motors placed horizontally and vertically and that prints data including a speed value decision unit deciding speed values of motors placed horizontally and vertically in response to the result of modification and outputs the results of the decision, and a motor drive controlling unit driving the motors placed horizontally and vertically, in accordance with the decided speed values of the motors in response to the results of the decision.

Regarding claim 18, the prior art of record does not teach all the combined steps for a method of adjusting a printing width of a printing paper including the steps of deciding a speed value of the motor placed horizontally and a speed value of the motor placed vertically from the selectively modified width decision value and the modified height decision value, and driving the motors placed horizontally and vertically according to the decided speed values of the motors placed horizontally and vertically.

Regarding claim 19, the prior art of record does not teach all the combined elements and components for an apparatus, including first and second motors to drive printing operations, to adjust a printing width of a printing paper including a speed value decision unit to decide speed values of the first and second motors in response to the result of modification and outputs the results of the decision', and a motor drive controlling unit to drive the first and second motors according to the decided speed values of the motors in response to the results of the decision.
